This picture showcases the importance of attempting to reach your goals, to have a perspective of yourself that is looking out for your future and for others surrounding you. To make a change in this world one must look inside themselves and discover their mission. Having a stronger understanding of what one’s own needs are, as well as their people’s, will help them have a greater understanding of what they can do to help themselves as well as their community. Self-reflection is key in understanding what one’s purpose is in life, what someone feels inclined to do, no matter the scale. It is important that we all try to reach for our own goals to help benefit not only ourselves but our world. By encouraging others to do the same, we will have a world with more love, peace, and optimism. In order to do this we must look inside ourselves and discover our own purpose, then push our dreams to reality.
